The following not proven by certificates, but believed to be true.

his Father, James Perrott B.1818 c ?? D.13-3-1877 Bristol, married Elizabeth Baker Williams at St. Thomas Church, Bristol on the 28-9-1850. Both buried in the Aronvale Cemetery Bristol. They had six children :-

James Henry was baptised St Thomas Church Bristol, the other five children were baptised in the Parish Church Ceddar.

I now have a missing period and come to names and dates in a family Bible "that does not exist" as it is top secret, some family problem I believe. At this stage I have not set eyes on the Bible, it however does exist as you will find a copy of a report from the Melbourne State Library dated October 18th. 1983.

*John Miller told me in his Bible Bible was in book not in the original or Bible that was the same as the one I had seen in Perth a lot in many other Bibles copied. I say old history, with papers. I kept in My Perrott line is meant to be connected too Sir John Perrot, Ha Ha, like so many others, also to the castle at Laugharne but which one, Roach (Roche) castle or the castle right in Laugharne or both.

I wonder if Thomas (1701) is father of James.

Late 18th-century mottled calf with blind-tooled borders, small gilt fillets and tools on the spine, cracked joints repaired with 20th-century tape; binder's ticket on front pastedown: 'J.R.TAYLOR | BOOK-BINDER | SWANSEA'. A few minor tears in the text. Numerous ownership and other inscriptions throughout, all apparently of Welsh origin, in a variety of 17th- and 18th-century hands; the earliest dated one on verso of NT title-page 'James Gowy is the true owner of this booke Selem [sic] Patria Christi... 1617'; on E1^v of Psalms and elsewhere 'John Griffiths his book 1697'; on Rrr3^v 'Roger Maynwaring Llandovery... 1699' and 'Jane Williams'; in margin of Yy8^v 'Thomas Perrott his Book 1701'; on F7^v of Psalms 'David Perrott... 1760', opposite 'David Perrott to Thomas Perrott this Book'; on F3^v of Psalms 'Anne Griffiths her Book'; extensive genealogical notes on these and other members of the Perrott family of Boshaston, Pembrokeshire, continue throughout the margins of the Psalms, from which it appears likely that a lengthy genealogy of the family could be constructed. Embedded in these notes is a contemporary account of a pew-rental dispute at Laugharne in 1754, apparently resolved in the presence of a lawyer at Gray's Inn (see C3^v of Psalms).

All the foregoing Mr. Edward Collins wrote out for me, for you from what his mother Hester Collins told him she you know was cousin Ann Taylor's sister. Copied by Matel Rose Denner 8 August 1899

This is copied from a letter written to me (Mabel) by cousin Hester Collins dated June 17th 1892

I will remember your Greatgrandmother she was a woman of property; they had only one son, when old enough he was sent to England to be educated, his father wanted him to be a lawyer, his Mother said on no account so the young Henry followed the vent of his own inclinations & went about the country with his gun and dogs. Became a deep shot, married very early quite a youth & his wife quite as young she died in childbed also her baby her young husband was in great grief for a short time but Miss Bloddrall a very pretty young girl came to pay her uncle (cousin David's Father) a visit; her father's first love & married again much against his parents consent for he was very idle never applied himself to business very unlike his father for he was a very energetic old man, he was a great trouble to his mother & owing to the life he led he became very unhealthy, about in all kinds of weather, his poor wife was not to be envied she was a most devoted wife nursed him oftentimes when laid up through his own imprudence, then she old people were not the most liberal living very close themselves: her husband was much beloved & regretted by the few who knew him, he died when quite young & left his wife with 5 boys & a girl and I won't say for certain but I think his mother's name was Howels not a Swansea woman, I think she had a good deal of property at Larne not of much value at that time but it became a very flourishing place & if not sold would have been very valuable the whole town nearly or quite would have belonged to the Parrot's Mr. Bloddrall was left by the old gentlemen well executor, kind hearted men as ever lived but not a man of business, she also had a good many houses in Swansea leasehold & freehold the life hold belonged to the church, they lived & died in the house next to my nieces now a Public house: ~~the~~ the young widow lived there with her children; there was property in back lane & Morris Lane, a large house at the bottom & at one end one or two very good houses in High Street after the old folks death Mr. Henry Perrott removed to Bristol in order to be near her brother to educate and place out her boys, she had no further interest in Swansea, Your Father when he came of age took what was coming to him & went into business, better if he had remained with his uncle. & His Uncle not only took his own but the trust-money all for want of business experience & then his health was not good. He put the boys to what he considered to be good without studying inclinations. Tom to a coach builder. Henry to Ironmongery which he hated. Daniel had a splendid chance but he like his father only cared for sport. James to a watchmaker Old Mr. & Mrs. Perrott were regular attendants at St John's I expect she & her husband lie there and most likely their son

This belongs to Ann Taylor
